General Mills UK wins a place on the UK's Best Workplaces ranking

Uxbridge-based food company General Mills UK – responsible for selling and marketing a range of successful brands, including Old El Paso, Green Giant, Betty Crocker and Nature Valley – has been named by Great Place to Work® as one of the UK's Best Workplaces in the Medium category (organisations with 50-499 employees) in its annual Best Workplaces ranking.

Ranked 49th, it is the 4th consecutive year that General Mills UK – which has its HQ in Harman House, George Street – has achieved the honour, recognising the company's achievements in creating a working environment that encourages high levels of trust and engagement between its 150+ employees.

"We are delighted to receive this honour as it is testament to our ability to attract and retain talented people," explains General Mills UK MD Markus Muehleisen. "The methodology that is used to select Great Place to Work® companies is one of the most rigorous available and comprises both an employee survey and an audit into our organisation's management and HR practices.

"The award also recognises the strength of our leadership team and the range of innovative, creative and effective HR policies we have which creates our workplace culture."

Tom O'Byrne, Great Place to Work® CEO, adds: "We are delighted to see General Mills UK on our Best Workplaces list this year. It is a validation of the strength of their leadership and their commitment to creating the kind of culture where employees enjoy coming to work and want to do their best. The hallmark of a great workplace like General Mills UK is that their policies and practices are designed around the employee; this employee focus helps attract and retain the talent essential for driving and sustaining competitive performance."
